

L E A V E S ~ • F R O M • T H E • B O D H I • T R E E ~

¶ Buddha, the worship of thee consists in doing good to the world. --Bhakti Sataka.

¶ Why should we cling to the perishable body? In the eye of the wise, the only thing it is good for is to benefit one's fellow creatures. --Katha Sarit Sagara

¶ Our deeds are not lost, they will surely come back again. --Kokaliya-sutta.

¶ He who is tender to all that lives . . . is protected by heaven and loved by men. --Fa-kheu-pi-u.

¶ Who is a (true) spiritual teacher? He who, having grasped the essence of things, ever seeks to be of use to other beings. --Prasnotaramalika.

¶ Humble in mind, but large in gracious deeds, abundant in charity to the poor and helpless.

~ Day and night the mind of Buddha's disciples always delights in compassion. --Dhammapada.

¶ Surely if living creatures saw the consequence of all their evil deeds, . . . with hatred would they turn and leave them, fearing the ruin following.

~ When pure rules of conduct are observed, then there is true religion. --Fo-sho-king-tsang-king.

¶ Not superstitious rites, but kindness to . . . servants, reverence towards venerable persons, self-control with respect to living creatures, . . . these and similar virtuous actions are the rites which ought indeed to be performed. --Rock Inscription of Asoka.

¶ Hear ye all the moral maxim, and having heard it, keep it well; "Whatsoever is displeasing to yourselves never do to another." --Bstanhgur.

For my Husband
With my deepest love -
Sarah

HARBISON AND HARBISON
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS
OCEANO, CALIF.