

A Birthday Present for John Flinn.
To be used for the purchase of something that is highly desirable
but wholly impracticable.

Christmas Is Here!

Christmas is:
The rustle of secrets...
Tinsel shining in eyes...
Lighted trees gleaming through warm windows...
Whisperings, surprise...
It's stockings
decorating chimneys...
The silvery peal of bells...
Candy canes
and midnight carols...
Kitchens with spicy smells...

It is the fine,
large giving...
Of little,
big-stitched gifts...
It's Santa Clauses
in red flannel...
Moonglow on snowdrifts...
Holly berries
bursting from corners...
The woodsy scent of pine...
It is the soul's
immortal music...
It is the heart's star-shine!

Emily Carey Alleman

May Christmas this year
Be your happiest yet,
May it bring you bright moments
You'll never forget,
May the good old traditions
Bring pleasure to you,
May your loved ones
and friends
Share your happiness, too,
May the season bring joys You'll recall through the years--
For memories like these Are the heart's souvenirs.

In appreciation of the excellent help you have rendered in this time of great difficulty.

Dear John:-

I would be delighted to have you here. Doroethy says your timeing would fit into her plans. So it seems things are working out. I am able still to manage my affairs, but I am 94 and feel the call to the other side. I could lose my capacities, tho I am striving to hold them. In a sense I look forward to the transition, ~~the~~ concerned about making the right moves.

Please advise me as to your planned moves.

I enjoyed having you with me and look forward to a renewal of the relationship.

Incidentally I have been thinking of a trip to the Coast Redwoods.

My best regards,

Yogi.

*May He, who long ago was born
In Bethlehem on Christmas morn,
Be very near today and bless
You and your loved ones with happiness.*
